This information sheet is for young people. At the University of Edinburgh, we are carrying out a research study about a website that helps young people learn how Large Language Models (LLMs), such as ChatGPT, work. We would like to invite you to take part.

This information sheet explains who we are, what you will be asked to do, and what will happen if you decide to take part.

Taking part is completely your choice. Even if you decide to join, you can change your mind and stop at any time. You do not have to give a reason.

Who is organising the study?

The researcher collecting data is Xinyao Liao (s2810619@ed.ac.uk), an MSc student at the School of Informatics, University of Edinburgh. The project is supervised by Prof Judy Robertson (Judy.Robertson@ed.ac.uk).

How can I help?

You have been invited because you are between 12 and 14 years old, which is the age group that this educational website has been designed for.

You can help by using the website and telling us what you think about it. Your feedback will help us understand whether the website is easy to understand, interesting and useful for young people.

What will happen if I choose to participate?

If you decide to take part, you will first read a short information page and agree to take part in the study.

You will then use an interactive educational website about Large Language Models (LLMs). After you finish using the website, you will be asked to complete a short online questionnaire about your experience.

There are no interviews, face-to-face meetings, audio recordings, video recordings or photographs in this study.

You can stop at any time if you no longer want to continue. You do not have to explain why. If you would like to stop, simply close the webpage or let the researcher know.

What will happen after I have taken part?

We will use the questionnaire responses to understand how young people learn about Large Language Models and whether the website helps explain these ideas clearly.

We will write about what we have learned in reports, presentations and the researcher's MSc dissertation. Your name will not appear anywhere, and nobody will be able to identify you from your responses.

Can I ask a question?

Of course! If there is anything you do not understand, you can ask as many questions as you like.

You can ask the researcher directly by email, or ask your parent or guardian to contact us on your behalf if you would prefer.
